The first one has been done for you.

A thing that the Spartans liked very much was what they called black broth, so much so that the older men did not eat any meat, but gave all of it to the young men. It is said that the King of Sicily bought a slave who had been a Spartan cook and ordered him to make the soup for him, even if it cost a lot; but when the king tasted it he spat it out in disgust; and the cook said, "Your Majesty, it is necessary to have exercised in the Spartan manner, and to have bathed in the River Eurotas, to enjoy this broth."

7 Read the passage below and answer all the questions that follow.

Lykourgos made the law that the king would be in charge of all public sacrifices for the state because he was descended from the gods. He said that kings should be given the honour of receiving the things offered at the sacrifices, and he gave them very good land in many of the nearby cities, enough to live comfortably without being very rich. And so that the kings could also set up camp and have dinner in public, he gave them public quarters and he honoured them with a double portion of food at the evening meal.

Xenophon The Constitution of the Spartans 15, 2–4 (adapted)

13 Read the passage about the riot in the amphitheatre in Pompeii. Tick the correct box to answer the questions.

One has been done for you.

There was a serious fight between the inhabitants of Nuceria and Pompeii. It arose at a gladiatorial show. Abuse led to stone-throwing, and then swords were drawn. The people of Pompeii, where the show was held, came off best. Many injured Nucerians were taken to Rome. Many people died. The emperor told the senate to investigate the affair. When the news was reported back, the senate banned Pompeii from holding any similar shows for ten years and the sponsor of the show and his associates were sent into exile.

Tacitus Annals XIV.17 (adapted) What was unusual about this fight in the amphitheatre? It was the first show held in Pompeii. В It was very expensive. С Nobody was watching. D The spectators were fighting. Example (a) What had started the riot? Α a bad show В a stampede С overcrowding D shouting insults [1] (b) Which side won the fight? It was a draw. I live near a bath-house. I hear the grunts of men exercising and heaving the weights around. I hear their breath hissing when they release it. If a man has a massage I hear the slap of the hand on his shoulder; you can tell whether it's hitting a flat or a hollow. If a ball-player starts shouting out his score, I hear it; plus those who plunge into the pool with a huge splash of water; the armpit-hair plucker whose cries are loud so as to get people's attention and never stop except when he's doing his job and making someone else yell; the mingled cries of the sellers of drinks, sausages, pastries and hot snacks.

Pliny describes the dangers of the eruption of the volcano near Pompeii.

The ground outside his room rose so high with the mixture of ash and stones that if my uncle had stayed in there any longer, it would have been impossible for him to escape. He got up and came out, going back to his friend and the others who had not been able to sleep. They discussed what to do, whether to stay inside or to try the open air. The buildings were being shaken by lots of strong tremors, and seemed to have come away from their foundations and to be sliding backwards and forwards. Outside, however, there was danger from the rocks that were raining down, although they were light bits of pumice. Weighing up both the dangers, they chose the outdoors; in my uncle's case it was a rational decision, the others just chose the option that frightened them the least.
