NATURAL TREASURES

Britain has many treasures. The jewels in the crown could be easily the National Parks. These are dotted around the country.

The farthest west is Exmoor. The most northern is the Cairngorms in Scotland.

The most recent to join this celebrated group is the New Forest. It is located in Hampshire and covers 37,500 hectares of Crown land.

It has always been renowned for its deer. There are several species in the New Forest.

There is a deer ~~sanctuary~~ ~~haven~~ at Bolderwood. Visitors can assemble at the viewing platform to see them. They gather during the spring and summer months waiting to be fed by the local keeper. ✓

The New Forest Pony is indigenous to the area and is famed for its versatility and hardiness. They are a source of delight to the visitors when the foals are born. Although these ponies appear to be wild, they all have owners who are called commoners.

Many roam the moorland.

William the Conqueror gave the area its name. He decreed that it should be a royal hunting ground in 1079.

The New Forest attracts ~~tourists in their hundreds~~ <sup>many thousands of visitors</sup>. The camp sites are full every year with caravans and tents. A large income is generated for local businesses by these tourists who reside in the many hotels and guest houses. For those wishing to stay in other accommodation there are bed and breakfast establishments and a wide choice of public houses.

There are a number of very popular sports in the region. They include orienteering, horse riding, bird watching, hiking, cycling and fishing.

On completion, ensure you have saved your work and then use your software facilities to perform a word count. Key in this figure on a separate line below the final line of text.

SALES

These days there are many places where items can be bought and sold. High Street shops are now in competition with sellers on the Internet. One major benefit the shops have is that goods can be seen and examined by the customer before purchase. However, Internet sites very often offer the same goods at a much lower price. It really depends on whether a customer wants to spend the time travelling to the shopping centres or sitting at home and browsing the web.

The Christmas season is a good indication of trade. Bargains can be picked up in the sales. Surplus stock is often discounted.
